Paris, France – June 13, 2024

Eric Salmon & Partners has completed an important milestone in its own succession planning agenda; the Shareholders have elected Jean-Etienne Boisseau as new Chief Executive Officer. He succeeds Raoul Nacke, who has led the firm for the past seven years.

Jean-Etienne Boisseau started his career at McKinsey. He spent a couple of years in corporate projects and general management positions before joining Eric Salmon & Partners in 2017. He is a next-generation leader, known for his strategic focus and client-centric perspective on business.

Raoul Nacke stated: “Jean-Etienne’s strategic vision and forward-thinking approach align perfectly with our company’s values and long-term objectives. He is a perfect choice to drive sustained growth in the years to come, including by attracting and involving the next generation”.

We welcome Jean-Etienne Boisseau to his new position and wish him great success in his mandate.
